Two of the biggest opening weekend games are Washington vs. Auburn in Atlanta and Michigan at Notre Dame. The Huskies must win if they want the Pac 12 to be taken seriously. The Tigers are a quality team, but will still end up with three losses.

A loss will not necessarily sink the loser of ND-Michigan, but will mean they will have to win the rest of their games to be considered for the playoffs. Much is expected of both teams, but we think this is Michigan's year and will be on the Wolverines as a two-point favorite.

Why does Harry Bondi expect Florida to be a surprise team in the SEC? Turn to page 2.

No player means more to his team than Oregon QB Justin Herbert. The Ducks averaged 51 points per game in the eight games he started last year and only 15 in the five games he missed with a broken collarbone. Oregon will have its third head coach in the last three years, which is a big concern, after Willie Taggart took the Florida State head job after only one year in Eugene. Mario Cristobal takes over and his only head coaching experience was at Florida International where he was a horrendous 27-48.

Boston College has 16 starters back, including 10 on offense, and will have Head Coach Steve Addazio's best team in the six years he's been in Chestnut Hill. An easy early schedule should have the Eagles a perfect 7-0 headed into a Friday night home showdown with Miami. That will be a loss and will start a month long gauntlet of games in which BC could go winless at Virginia Tech and Florida State and home against Clemson.

USC Trojans should win the Pac 12 South even after losing their starting QB, leading WR and leading RB for the first time since 1980. The Trojans have been money at home winning their last 16 in the Coliseum, but were just 3-3 in 2017 on the road. Tough trips to Stanford and Texas in September could both be losses, but USC should run the table from there as they avoid both Washington and Oregon until the Pac 12 Championship Game.

2018 SEASON WIN TOTAL OVER/UNDERS

Over the years Harry Bondi's over/under season win totals have been highly sought after and proven to be extremely profitable, going 5-0 last year and winning at a 83% clip (50-10) the last nine seasons. Here, we present five of our Best Bets for 2018. To receive three more Best Bets, please visit HarryBondi.com or call 1-877-332-0077 and use the code: "Season Win Best Bets."

LSU: UNDER 7.5 WINS (-150)

If you read our July issue, you know we think it will be a long year for LSU. The Tigers have less talent offensively than they have had in years. QB continues to be a problem and for the first time in recent memory they do not have a stud running back. Toss in a killer schedule that starts with Miami and includes road trips to Auburn, Florida, and Texas A&M as well as Alabama and Georgia at home and you can see why we think eight wins will be a stretch. "Coach O" is one of our "Coaches on the Hot Seat" (see page 4) and could be gone before the season ends. GO UNDER!

FLORIDA: OVER 8 WINS (-125)

Last season was over before it started for the Gators, who lost a starting RB and WR, plus eight other players to suspension just before Game 1. Add in a pile of injuries throughout the season and the result was a 4-7 season. With a new head coach (Dan Mullen) and renewed optimism, we won't be surprised if Florida wins 10 games in 2018. One good thing about all those injuries last year is that underclassmen accounted for 50% of the team's starts (third-most in the nation) and that will pay off this season. Meanwhile, QB Feleipe Franks could be a sleeper Heisman Trophy candidate. GO OVER!

UNDER*BYU: UNDER 5.5 WINS (-110)

If we had to add a sixth man to our "Coaches of the Hot Seat" column (see page 4) it would be BYU's Kalani Sitake, who went from 9-4 in his first season to 4-9 last year. This year, the schedule is much tougher, with road games at Arizona, Wisconsin, Washington, Boise State and Utah. Those are all losses. That means the Cougs will have to win six of their other seven games for us to lose this bet, and that ain't happening! Not with an offense that ranked 118th in the nation last year and returns just two starters on the O-line, fewest in 9 years. GO UNDER!

OVER*BEARS: OVER 6.5 WINS (-150)

No two ways about it, Da Bears quit on Head Coach John Fox last year and it showed as they dropped seven of their last nine games on the way to a 5-11 finish. Obviously, with the firing of Fox and the hiring of former KC offensive coordinator Matt Nagy there has been a major upgrade at head coach. With Nagy running the show, the offense is bound to improve and the Bears, believe it or not, had a top 10 defense last year. No reason to think Chicago can't improve by at least two wins this year, especially with a favorable schedule. GO OVER!

UNDER*ARIZONA: UNDER 6 WINS (-125)

Arizona has gutted out an average of 9.8 wins per season the last 5 years, but much of that was due to the superior coaching of Bruce Arians. Unlike the Bears (see above) the change at head coach in Arizona is not a positive. According to our metrics, the Cards will play the toughest schedule in the NFL this season, and with a questionable offensive line we don't expect the fragile Sam Bradford to make it through the season, meaning the team will be pinning its hopes on rookie QB Josh Rosen. GO UNDER!

The Big 12 is wide open this year with four teams capable of winning the conference. Oklahoma is again loaded, but must replace Heisman Trophy winner Baker Mayfield at QB. Texas will be much improved, and TCU has one of the best defenses in the nation, but our sleeper pick to win the Big 12 is West Virginia. The Mountaineers have one of college football's best offenses led by the best QB in the nation in Will Grier. Defense has been the team's downfall in the past, but this year's defense looks like the best in years with the additions of Clemson grad transfer Jabril Robinson, Penn State transfer Brenon Thrift and freshman stud Dante Stills.

Former Clemson quarterback Hunter Johnson, the No. 2 rated

HARRY BONDI'S 2018 COLLEGE COACHES on the HOT SEAT

1. Ed Orgeron - LSU

As we mentioned in our July issue, this is the least talented LSU team in years and the schedule is brutal. "Coach O" is a great guy and recruiter, but at both USC and LSU he has proven that he can't lead a program. Tiger boosters don't like winning just 8 or 9 games a season and may only win six this year. "O Must Go!"

2. Jim Harbaugh - Michigan

Huge expectations in Ann Arbor when Harbaugh was hired. In three years, he has failed to beat Ohio State and is 1-2 against Michigan State. His 28-12 record is not bad, but another loss to the Buckeyes and another year without at least a trip to the Big 10 title Game will force a tough fire in Ann Arbor.

3. Chris Ash - Rutgers

Rutgers could win five of its first six games, but will lose five of its last six, and that will be the end of Ash. He's 6-18 in his first 2 seasons and .500 at best this year.

4. Dave Beaty - Kansas

Another great guy going down! Beaty took over a program that was barely at the Division 1 level and has gone 3-33 in his first three seasons with just one power five conference win against Texas in 2016. KU has become college football's worst program and will be looking for another new coach at the end of the year.

5. Lovie Smith - Illinois

Why was he hired in the first place? He was a .500 NFL coach and has gone 5-19 in his first two years at Illinois. Oh, and they have paid him $3.5 million per year for those results! Lovie hadn't been on a college sideline for over 20 years when he was hired and should not be allowed back for another 20!
